PRESS RELEASE

Senior Sector Leader Appointed Chair of The Housing Forum

Stephen Teagle has been appointed as the new Chair of The Housing Forum.

Chief Executive of Galliford Try Partnerships, and member of the Executive Board brings over 25 years' experience in the affordable housing sector.

In his role as Chair, Stephen will lead the cross-sector membership network for the housing supply chain during a time where the sector is increasingly viewed as fundamental for the country's future.

He takes over from Andy von Bradsky who was appointed as MHCLG's Head of Architecture in February.

Chief Executive of The Housing Forum, Shelagh Grant, said:

'We are looking forward to working with Stephen to lead The Housing Forum in its aims to deliver collaborative solutions that increase housing supply, and improve the quality of homes delivered.

'Stephen has been a long-term advocate of partnership working, which is central to The Housing Forum's purpose and role.'

Commenting on his appointment, Stephen said:

'It is a privilege to be able to represent the membership and to build on the great work of the Forum. Improving the quality and number of homes delivered is our shared ambition and we will continue to argue strongly for policies which future-proof the supply of new homes'

About The Housing Forum:

The Housing Forum is an influential cross-sector membership network of landlords, local authorities, contractors, developers, architects, consultants, manufacturers and suppliers that represents the entire housing supply chain on behalf of the housing industry.

Our network of member organisations and businesses collaborate to develop and improve the nation's housing stock, sharing knowledge, expertise and best practice through participation in bespoke networking events and workshops.

Membership of The Housing Forum gives housing businesses the opportunity to shape the future. Our views and content are drawn from the wide experience and innovation of our membership.

We have over 160 member organisations from both the public and private sectors, collaborating to inform, influence and network.

The Housing Forum also conducts a comprehensive research programme through a series of Working Groups, with members actively contributing to produce output to influence government, stakeholders and the creation of housing policy, and to help to better inform the house building process.

The Housing Forum shares offices with NHBC (National Housing Building Council), which also provides administrative support.
